Both faculties represent mutually complementing theological, spiritual and cultural legacy and at the same time are both open to mutual development in sharing the experience in academic research, especially of the theological, humanistic and social-political fields.

have concluded the agreement below which states that both parties confirm:

1. The exchange of the lecturers, ensuring the emolument for their lectures. The emolument is dependent on the amount of lecture hours and the lecturer's academic degree. The requirement as to the lecturer is that he/she has at least a good command of the English or Italian language or the lecture language of the faculty in question.
2. Mutual information about, and invitations, to symposia and academic conferences. The lecturers of both faculties may be at any time invited with a speech or lecture to such meetings. In that case the date, the length and the language of the speech will be individually agreed.

3. The exchange of lecturers for the purpose of academic research. In certain cases the faculty is entitled to delegate, for the same period of time, a student of the second or third cycle of theology (licentiate of sacred theology or doctorate). In that case a written recommendation of the Dean is required.
